Dr. Kasey Gregory Family Practice

Dr. Kasey Gregory will be joining the team at the newly established Forks Family Medical Clinic opening September 30, 2019. Dr. Gregory will be providing care to patients of all ages. She is certified by the American Board of Family Medicine, and has her Advanced Cardiac Life Support, Pediatric Advanced Life Support, and Neonatal Resuscitation Program Certifications.

Dr. Gregory has been practicing medicine since 2013. Dr. Gregory first realized she wanted a career in medicine at 5 years old. As she grew she never wavered in her desire to help people lead full and healthy lives. While a student at Rosalind Franklin University in Chicago, she minored in anthropology. Medicine mixed with anthropology shapes her practice; learning a patient's history and story create a whole picture of health.

Completing her medical degree at Chicago Medical School allowed her to gain experience in critical care needs. After coming to the west coast, she fell in love with rural health care and the unique needs associated with small town living. Dr. Gregory's husband was stationed at Kingsley Field Air Base in Klamath Falls, Oregon and she enjoyed the small community and working with a medically underserved population. As much as she enjoyed her time in Klamath Falls, she longed to work and live somewhere more isolated with a smaller population. Her husband recently lost his grandmother, a long time resident of Clallam Bay, and they made the decision to move and take over the property. Dr. Gregory has moved to Clallam Bay with her husband, who is a Veteran Air Force Serviceman who is continuing to serve his country as a member of the Air National Guard, their son Wayland, age 3, and their 1 year old daughter, Kieran. They are enjoying the space of country living and have two dogs, a cat, chickens, and a horse.

Dr. Gregory believes in whole patient care and takes the time needed to treat each patient's individual needs. She loves getting to know the people she serves. The small clinic on G street will allow her to build relationships with her patients and their families. Dr. Gregory treats patients aged infant through geriatric. She enjoys treating entire families; experiencing milestones alongside them, celebrating joyous occasions, and being empathetic to needs as trials come.

Dr. Gregory is a family practice doctor and has no training in alternative medicine practices. However, she respects that alternative forms of medicine are important to many of her patients. She will work with them to provide care that is respectful of chiropractic, acupuncture, and other treatments sought in combination with general western medicine.
